

Our Path

By Eydie McDaniel

True leaders willingly follow.
Best leading tunes in, listens, cares, inspires,
and moves upward.

Maybe the loneliest person is the one who could never learn to share, so clamored instead to take control.

If well trained unworthiness kneels
at the feet of the selfish controller, oppression results.
There on top of their own oppression,
ever pushing downward,
the controller has no chance to rise.

No one comes to them on the tennis court of life,
to receive their perfect deadly serve.

There stands the domineering controller waiting
ball in hand,
completely in control,
and completely alone.

An upward path emerges from courageous sharing and the ever liberating ability to trust.

A true and strong light shines from each person.
Standing side by side these lights make bright the path for everyone to travel onward, and upward together.
