

The War of the Sexes
By Howie Flomberg

In a blog called Planting Trees, the blogger, one Thomas Fiske, admitted that he was a “POW in the War Between the Sexes.” In the post he says:

Despite my groveling and deference I grew up suffering at their hands. Women can detect even the slightest fear and will take advantage of any male who shows it.

In a word or two: I Identify. However, let’s look the differences between genders. I kept it as clean as possible. I did cheat and spend some time on the Internet.

Pro Male:

- I look better with wrinkles.
- I look distinguished with grey hair.
- I can grow a beard or mustache without looking weird.
- I make more money doing the same job as women do.
- I wear comfortable shoes when I am dressed up
- I do not have bunions
- If two men show up at a wedding wearing the same suit, they really don’t care.
- Someone else makes wedding plans. You just show up.
- Men are less likely to suffer from depression or anxiety disorders.
- Men are more likely to become CEO’s of large corporations.
- Men can be the President of the United States.
- Phone conversations are over in thirty seconds or less.
- A week-long vacation only takes one suitcase.
- You don’t have to wait in line at restaurant bathrooms.
- Chocolate is just another snack.
- You know about tanks and guns.
- Your last name doesn’t change.
- There’s no real shame in being a dirty old man.

Cons:

- Your sensitive man parts are external to your body.
- In a divorce you get totally screwed.

I honestly cannot think of any more.