

How to Live Each Day
by Harry Zirkelbach

Some reflection,
and I select that which each works at daily, and this is to enjoy this fabulous adventure we begin anew each morning.

On rising each sets forth to make life a continuation of past unchangeable decisions, made minute by minute, alone and with others, stranger and friend.

It is this magnificent multi-colored fabric of a life well spent,
others witnessed,
commented upon as friend.

Daily we unconsciously determine not to dwell on past steps, because this is who we are,
would never change.

Because the Invisible rules, we proceed, eyes and mind open, allow this spectacular gift to continue,
share it with others.
It is our life.

Day by day we hone the minutes.
We continue to weave this façade others witness.
It is our adventure.
The more we share, the better the experience.

We in the Windsor Gardens Writers' Group write of this experience, the media daily celebrate a facet of some heroic or tragic life, actors play the life of others
on film or stage,
but only you can perform the daily routines that continue your creation.

So do it well.
And smile.
Everyone depends on you.
