Bible - Any book, authoritative or official.

Yes, you heard me correctly, Where is your Bible?

Nonsense. Yes, you do have a bible.

It is that god-given book, some may call it memory and conscience, initially all blank pages, on which are recorded both small and significant things you have done all our life; following paths you have chosen; followed since being human; it's your DNA. You have opened pages daily, fulfilling the destiny you cannot foresee, cannot avoid, cannot swap with anyone, but share with everyone met. Your Bible is small, weightless; and beautifully, yours alone. Be proud of who you have become.

All who have ever written for publication share segments of their bible with those who listen or read. We in Writers Group of Windsor Gardens do that unabashedly every Monday morning by writing, then reading our thoughts aloud.

I write to tell of the moments I have shared joyously, tell you pieces of my bible. Then in the 57 minutes remaining get to know each other writer as they share. We know more of one another than most realize, continue to be contributor, because what we have done to get here, is in our DNA, and those genes.

From the earliest day, we recognize that the bible of Mother and other blessed elders, established dos and don'ts that become part of our bible. This continues through life as we move into school years, employment, marriage, family, finally old age.

And now a note for any who have read THE BIBLE, consider those messages unattainable to those of our era; yet that was the same response when written for contemporaries of those scribes.

THE BIBLE is often called the Good Book.

For those who read it, it can be more; for these Books are grammatical, well written, the message easily discernible. Reading the Bible has been a training text for many desiring to tell a understandable story, simply. There are few 500 word sermons in any of those writings. And re-reading those texts does influence the bible that is our life; that open, book in progress, even recording what is said and done here, these finite todays.

Matthew, Mark, Luke and John are the primary tellers of the life of their Master, yet only two knew him personally. So it may be with we of Windsor Writers. For what we write and read here tells a small audience of our thoughts; but the potential audience exists in the larger world having access to wg-wg. At some indefinite tomorrow one may read of what we said today, heed and be inspired to creativity we cannot imagine.

That brought me here. For me and all here To tell of the wonders, people met, not directly for those here, but for the family of myself and man, that we influence the larger audience, alive and still to be born.

May they be inspired to more than we imagine from ourselves.
