

Parade

by Hary Zirkelbach 1 May 2016
Stars and Sun date 35138

At one time everyone loved a Parade, even the military required to “dress up” march down the Avenue to the adoring crowd, on what might’ve been their free time, following the band in uniforms often designed by Cecil de Mille of Hollywood. There wasn’t a President inaugurated without a parade the included most military bands stationed in Washington, supplemented by one from the President’s Home State. Flags and Buntings on every conceivable post in the sea, and shout of joy and happiness from the throng watching or viewing on television.

Time change everything.

But so does the public expectations.

Constitution Avenue Ave in he nations capitol may never see another such sea of young men and flags except in a Presidential funeral

Who shall marshal the Uniforms for such a parade?

A leader.