After being instructed to March all that earlier month
what could be more welcome than three ladies,

April, May and June

and their offspring, yes, days full of Spring.

Ah, ladies of the year, together promising all that is enjoyable after the winter hiatus.

The words sing, in promise, delivery, hope.

In every life there's an April, May, June, and their experiences to remember. and in this long life, I have met few April, May, June women who demanded.

These months that reminder of time and the other bounty of nature, the female.

While attending a boys High School, then the Engineering College of Detroit, again no female candidates, it was April, May and June that lessened
attention to book and exams, replaced by dancing,
parties, celebrations, each spring.

While the three harbingers of Spring have extra duty as feminine names it was improbable that anyone might consider naming a child after the other nine months, unless you were inclined to wish for another Ceaser in he family.

On a personal marriage note, I would name the boys, ,Barbara, the girls. Her choice was easy for the first two, named after her mother then mine. On the next she deferred choosing a name, until told by he Hospital she and he child could not go home without a name. In all those eternal debates, the feminine three month names never was considered, though two were born in those months.

This conclusion - I'm constantly reminded through the historical archives of the Writers Group we have not been blessed with an April or May, excepting for the months themselves.. Yes, one June. The really neat part of this finding, these names were not applied to an animal either. Decent, gentle ladies in name and fact..

April, May, June, be kind to we mortals again this year.
