

Questions I Ask

By Liz Gibbons

I question many things about our behavior and about the state of our world, such as the following:

Why do we hate to exercise when we know it is good for our health?

Why do we lose self-control when presented with a table of sweet desserts that we know if we eat them they can create havoc in our body?

Why do some people interact more with other people on their Smart phones than in direct person to person interaction?

Why do we allow TSA agents to molest us at the airport?

Why are people who break the law treated in such inhumane ways by being isolated in prisons when what they need is love, support, and guidance?

Why do we continue to use fossil fuels when there are many energy technologies that can be developed to eventually provide free energy?

Why do we follow the dictates of the powers that be that tell us what we can and cannot say under the guise of “political correctness”?

Why do we continue to have an education system that is based on rote memorization instead of teaching children how to think for themselves?

Why are flu shots promoted so heavily instead of encouraging development of a healthy immune system?

Why are babies given a Hepatitis B inoculation on the first day of life for a disease that babies and children rarely acquire?

Why does the medical profession have such power that it can discredit natural remedies while promoting prescription drugs, which may have serious side effects, and even be allowed to advertise them on TV?

Why are chem trails being sprayed in our skies?

Why, in some cases, has it taken decades for sexual predation and pedophilia by certain prominent people to be revealed?

Why are so many of the packaged foods sold in grocery stores actually concoctions of cheap, bland, non-nutritious ingredients, laced with chemical additives and flavor enhancers, masquerading as real food?

Why is man the only creature in the modern world that has to pay to live on earth?

It is unfortunate that most of these situations persist because they generate income for the perpetrators or are used to control the masses. With the ungodly actions of people in high places in government, the media, Hollywood, and other industries being revealed, people are becoming aware of what is really going on in our society. As awareness increases, I believe that many of these situations that I question will be resolved.
