

Handling Challenging Personalities

By Liz Gibbons

One person declares, "That is the way it is."

The other person replies, "NO, THIS is the way it is."

Never the two shall agree.

Will they always argue about who is right?

Why does it really matter so much?

Can't they just enjoy the moment with each other?

Love and acceptance have the power to transcend their differences.

In situations with challenging personalities my friend, Denise, a Life Coach, advises:

Don't compromise yourself in order to avoid confrontation or to save a friendship.

Be Yourself.

Don't ever compromise what is important to you.

At the same time honor the other person.

Great adventures and a unique friendship may ensue.