

HOW I CAN MAKE THE WORLD BETTER

By Ruth Delhay

We may think we have nothing to give to make this world better, but day by day, our lives reflect what we believe and what we see. We can surely keep ourselves and our surroundings pleasant to look upon. We can speak kindly to those whom we meet on the streets. We can follow instructions, since they are for all of us to make this world a better place.

Long ago I learned that

...if I am strong, I owe the service to those who need my strength.

...if I have a melody, I owe the world a song.

...if I have a candle, I can give a little light to those who walk in darkness.

My gifts are most useful when I give them away, just as the rose gives its fragrance away.

Years ago I had to give a program about personal development, and I learned that each of us has something to share with our fellow man. I learned that a better world begins with me.
