

Of Course a Horse

By Suzy Hopkins

Every horse is born afraid of humans, even those born in a barn with people present. When the foal can stand it will hide behind its mother. As foals age they learn that people are good.

Over the years when I arrived at the barn I would hear a loud cheerful greeting whinny from my horse. That is my favorite sound. A thousand pound animal that was born afraid of people is now not only recognizing my voice but greeting me as it would another horse.

Evolution at its best.
