

Wishes

By Suzy Hopkins

The kittens were each given three wishes. The fluffy gray one quickly wished for crinkly sounding toys, milk and catnip. The sleek black one quietly wished for her own soft bed, clean kitty litter and quiet-time with her owner. The pretty calico thought about it for awhile. Then she wished for lasting things: a sunny window seat, a cat tree they all could share and three more wishes. When you take your time you might make a better choice than those who rush into decisions.
